Introduction: The most prevalent theme in Western Literature is the Arthurian Legend as it appears in numerous forms in virtually every period of English Lit—but in French, Spanish, Italian and German Lit as well. The most often asked question about this form, of course, is “why is it so popular and long lasting?” The next most asked question is “Did King Arthur ever really exist?” In the course of the next fourteen weeks we will examine both these questions, but finding definitive answers is probably beyond our scope since authors and scholars have spent centuries at the task and still have not arrived at satisfactory solutions.

Required Texts:
Joseph & Francis Gies. Life in a Medieval Castle, Harper Collins
Geoffrey of Monmouth. The History of the Kings of Britain, Penguin Classics.
Sir Gawain and the Green Knight, Ballantine.
T.H. White. The Once and Future King, Ace Books.

Course Requirements: Much of this course will focus on discussion of the various versions of the Arthurian Legend through the ages as well as of the literary traditions, which are represented (and sometimes originated) in stories. For this reason, it is essential that you all keep up with the readings. Thus there will be numerous quizzes of various lengths depending on the works assigned. At the end of the course, the lowest two scores (of regular quizzes) will be dropped. There will likewise be several extemporaneous oral reports, which will be assigned at the beginning of the class and delivered during the hour. Each of you will also prepare a major oral report on one of the characters or critters which appears in the stories. There will be four papers required, one approximately every three weeks. Lastly, there will be a take-home final, which will be due at the end of the fourteenth week. Instruction sheets for the oral reports and the papers as well as a list of suggested topics will be handed out as the course proceeds.

Course Procedures: Quizzes are given beginning of the hour: if you come late, they will not be started over: be on time. If you miss a class (unless it is an official university excused absence) you cannot make up the quiz or the oral report which you might have been assigned. Late papers are NEVER accepted, so do not waste your time or mine by coming into my office with some lame excuse. If you miss papers, you may as well drop the class as you cannot pass without handing in all the written assignments....

Because of the close connection between the historical periods and the versions of the Arthurian writings produced in them, we will of necessity spend some time on the backgrounds of the eras and the relationships of the various authors to them. As the reading cultures changed, so did the focus and concern of the writers. At the beginning, then, there will be more lecture than later in the course when most of our time will be taken by class discussion, which, you will notice constitutes a percentage of the class work. If you contribute to the class consideration of the works, you will earn these points: if you say nothing for fourteen weeks, you will definitely lose that percentage.

Movie Nights: In addition to reading the literature of the Arthurian Legends, we will likewise have a series of Movie Nights which will give us the chance to examine what filmmakers have done to and with the traditional stories. Times and places will be announced.
