Course Description
This is a writing course wherein you will practice communication in multiple modes and genres. Your thoughtful attention to the audience, context and purpose of each communicative instance will determine your success in this class. Additionally, your ability to identify and build an argument will be critically important, both for your written assignments and for your engagement in class discussions.

In this course you will also practice and improve your research skills. These skills will be grounded in rhetorical theory, as presented in your textbook, The Craft of Research.

Course Goals
1. To support and improve your writing practices.
2. To examine and discuss examples of excellent writing and thoughtful argumentation.
3. To give you practice in developing research questions and arguments.
4. To help you understand how and when to support your arguments with reasons, evidence and warrants.

Course Requirements

Major Assignments (20% each)

1. This I Believe
2. Research Project
3. Visual Argument

Other Assignments (10% each)

4. Student Led Discussion
5. Discussion responses and articles
6. Portfolio
7. In class discussion, informal presentations, quizzes
Late Assignments

I will not accept assignments made late by procrastination, laziness or apathy. If you are concerned about completing an assignment on time, let me know as far ahead of the due date as possible so we can discuss your options.

Grading

I will not use points when grading. Instead, I will use the guidelines below and on the following page.

You will earn an A or B in this class if you complete all of your work on time, do quality work, and show some genuine commitment. You'll earn a C if you meet deadlines with satisfactory effort or if some of your assignments are incomplete. You'll receive a D or F if your assignments are poorly executed or overdue, or if your attendance, participation, or effort is unsatisfactory.

Grading Standards

A—excellent. A work is an example of highly effective writing. It makes its purposes clear, reflects concern for its audience’s needs and responses, and is detailed, persuasive, effectively organized, exhibits appropriate format and tone, and is grammatically correct.

B—good. B work is successful, but lacks the polish or effectiveness of an A.

C—adequate. C work is effective though it lacks features necessary to succeed completely with its designated audience. Its purpose may not be entirely clear, it may not be effectively organized, it may not exhibit an appropriate tone or format, or it entails grammatical errors that make it difficult to read or understand than necessary.

D—poor. D work does not communicate effectively for several reasons. It may display an inadequate understanding of purpose or audience. It may lack information or be unpersuasive. Its organization may be confusing or misleading, and its tone or format may be inappropriate. It may be difficult to understand or contain serious errors in grammar.

F—unacceptable. F work does not satisfy the requirements of the assignment.
